

the clothes are being cleaned. Either we do the job right or we don't do it at all," added Commisso.

The company also only uses high-end soaps, as well as a special filtration system that distills and purifies solvents after each use. They always use fresh solvent for each batch of clothes so that they come out smelling fresh. This eliminates the transferring of body oils and bacteria from one person's garment to another.

When you bring your clothes to Spotless you will also notice that every piece of clothing comes back looking and feeling like new. This is because they use a fabric finish that injects the original sizing back into the clothes, giving them the body and shape they had when you first bought them.

The environment and its preservation are very important to Commisso. "We only use environmentally safe cleaning solutions and strictly adhere to all government regulations and guidelines," stated Commisso.

Spotless Dry Cleaners can clean almost any article of clothing including: everyday attire, wedding gowns, suede and leather, household draperies, blinds and pillows. Franchise owners and employees are trained to be able to assess your specific needs and offer you helpful recommendations.

All five processing plants have a customer service department to ensure that there is always someone available with whom you can talk to.

Spotless is all about convenience. Every Spotless location is fully automated.

Invoices are tracked electronically, ensuring not only accuracy and security, but that customers are serviced quickly. Spotless also offers a valet pickup and delivery service for those who are simply 'too busy.' "In today's world there is just not enough time in the day to get everything accomplished. We want to assist our customers and help ease their burden. A flexible valet service seemed to make sense and has become extremely popular," relayed Commisso.

Spotless keeps prices reasonable by continually offering promotions via coupons found on Spotless' website, in the Entertainment Book, and newspapers. Also, every Spotless location sells VIP cards that entitle customers to 20% off of dry cleaned items for an entire year.

Although Spotless Dry Cleaners has been Cathy Commisso's priority for over 12 years now, she always finds time to get involved with community events and fundraising.

"The community has been so good to us. It's important that we give back in any way that we can," she emphasized.

The company has been a large sponsor of the Canadian Cancer Society. It has formed the Spotless Team comprised of its employees who faithfully participate in the annual Breast Cancer Walk. They also hold annual barbecues, with all proceeds going to the Cancer Society.

Spotless has also been a big supporter of: Joseph Brant Hospital's Dove for Love Campaign, Tomorrow's Here Campaign, community squares, and the Rotary Club of Burlington's Giggles and Grubs.

Spotless also donates gifts to charitable events and kids' sports teams. "Spotless has a social responsibility to contribute in anyway that it can to the Burlington and Oakville communities that have supported us for over a decade," stated Commisso.

Spotless Dry Cleaners continues to grow and prosper with new locations opening regularly. The company is even branching out into the Milton community, where a surge in development is taking place.

Spotless Dry Cleaners offers investors a business opportunity at an affordable price, with minimal overhead, guaranteed full training and ongoing assistance. In addition, the required computers, software, furniture and fixtures, and customer service support are provided.

"Whether you're a customer or a franchise owners, we treat you with the highest regard," ended Commisso.
